Drops 40 Feet After Crash With Train; Believe Car Stalled on Tracks.

A Richland county woman was killed and another injured in accidents last night which lifted the county's death toll to twelve, nine more than for the same date last year.

Mrs. Alice Z. Denius, 60, of nearby Lexington, was killed instantly shortly after 5 p. m. when her auto was hurled over a 40-foot embankment by a Baltimore and Ohio freight train at the grade crossing on U. S. Route 42 in Lexington.

Coroner L. B. McCullough said that death was due to a fractured skull and broken neck. Edward Wagner, 52, Lexington, told Coroner McCullough and state highway patrolmen that he saw the woman's car stop on the track a moment before it was thrown high in the air by the impact with the train.

German Army Biggest Factor In France Now

Dominates Life, Politics; Ex-Premier Waits Day When He Can Use It To Establish Fascism.

By KENNETH DOWNS
(INS Staff Correspondent)

LISBON — From the moment you cross the closely-guarded line of demarcation from unoccupied into occupied France you run into an endless green tide of German troops.

They are everywhere—in the trains, in the streets, the stations, the fields. No village is too small or remote to have its kommandatur and quota of Nazi soldiers. You would hardly imagine there were so many German soldiers in the world.

Paris is, of course, packed with them. The city seems about as much German as French. Every large hotel in the city is completely requisitioned by the Nazis and most of the small hotels are filled with them as well.

You don't have to spend much time in occupied France before you begin to understand things that you didn't understand amid all the double-talk at Vichy.

You soon realize that the most important political fact in (Continued on Page 3, Col. 5)

Tells of Laval's Thirst for Revenge

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Embittered and vengeful, with the virus of insatiable ambition in his veins, there lives in German-occupied Paris today a once-powerful Frenchman, temporarily at least in eclipse, nursing dreams of revenge should war's fortunes again bring him to power.

Kenneth Downs, foreign correspondent of the International News Service, brings you today the story of swarthy, squat little Pierre Laval, of Fascist bent, determined to use the German army, when the day comes, to impose Fascist facade upon the politico-economic-military structure of France.

In the following article, second of a series, is revealed the dramatic inside story of the breakup between Chief of State Marshal Petain and one-time vice Premier Laval, the mutual hatred stemming therefrom that may affect French generations yet unborn.

MAMMOTH NEW TAX PLANNED FOR NEXT YEAR

Morgenthau Says Nation Will Seek To Collect Three and Half Billions.

SALES TAX CONSIDERED

Government Will Still Have To Borrow Half Billion Monthly For Expenses.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Secretary Morgenthau announced today that the administration and both Democratic and Republican congressional leaders had agreed to ask $3,500,000,000 of new taxes to be raised in the next year.

He told reporters after conferring with the leaders that President Roosevelt had approved the program and would, at an early date, discuss the program with the American people.

No details of how the money would be raised were disclosed, but the treasury secretary indicated the government would tap every possible means of raising a dollar in taxes.

—Despite former policies of the administration, he indicated that such drastic means as a general sales tax, payroll taxes and other heavy money-raising ideas were under consideration.

For the first time in treasury-congressional tax conferences during this administration, Republican leaders, as well as Democratic leaders were called in.

Morgenthau said, "I am happy to say that the combined Democratic and Republican leadership of the senate and the house gave unanimous approval to this program."

"We reached this figure," Morgenthau said, "on the basis that we ought to raise at least two-thirds of our expenditures by taxation and one-third by borrowing.

"We figure expenditures in the

DENIES REPORT

FDR Says U. S. Ships Are Not Protecting British.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— President Roosevelt, through Secretary Stephen T. Early, today categorically denied published reports that the U. S. navy and coast guard at present are giving armed escort to munition-laden British merchantmen leaving Atlantic ports for Europe.

"The president of the United States this morning said, after reading the Washington newspaper in which it appeared, that he thought the author of the story had very cleverly woven a long time and historic policy of the United States into a story which is a deliberate lie," Early said.

Approximately one-third of an inch of rain fell in Mansfield, and the weatherman today forecast more showers for tonight, Friday, and Saturday. It will be warmer tonight and cooler Saturday, the forecast said.

Lawns and pastures were revived by the rain and appeared much greener this morning. Leaves were beginning to show on trees and flowers were in bloom today.

Nazis Drench City In Bombs For 8 Hours

Death and Ruin Follow Attack Made In Reprisal for Berlin Raid; Germans Claim Continued Advances In Greece.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's Luftwaffe smashed at London in the most violent assault of the war last night—an eight-hour rain of havoc and death in which 400 Nazi planes dropped more than 100,000 incendiary and countless high explosive bombs on the capital of the empire.

Jubilantly, the Nazi press hailed the attack as "the biggest air raid of all times." German fliers said the city was still engulfed this forenoon by dense, flame-licked smoke.

The German high command officially described the raid as a "reprisal for the English destruction of the cultural and historic center of Berlin on April 9" and declared that henceforth every British air attack on German residential areas would be retaliated in fuller measure.

Crowded morgues, jammed hospitals and whole blocks of smouldering, fire-blackened wreckage testified to the fury of the attack.

Hours after the all-clear sounded at 5:30 a. m. (11:30 p. m. EST), ambulances still sped through the streets carrying victims to hospitals, and the shouts of firemen and rescuers echoed in the smoke-shrouded city.

The British Press association declared it was "the most vicious and wanton attack since the fire raid of last Dec. 29," when the "city," London's Wall Street district, was all but destroyed.

Eight hospitals were reported damaged, a theater and two movie houses were smashed, and an official communique said tersely that "casualties were heavy . . . considerable damage was done."

Lord Stamp, noted economist, well-known in the United States, and his wife were both killed.

Nazi pilots returning from the attack said they counted 80 major conflagrations and countless smaller fires.

On the Balkan warfront, the Luftwaffe played another tempestuous role, co-operating with waves of Nazi tanks in hammering at Allied lines in northern Greece.

Hitler's high command said German troops were pressing deeper into the Aegean kingdom, sweeping across the Aliakmon river and capturing the town of Servia, 70 miles from the Yugoslav frontier.

Dispatches from Athens said German losses were severe, with Allied field artillery and machine-guns meeting the attacks with a murderous fire.

Berlin said the German army was "at grips" with the British expeditionary force south of Mt. Olympus in a clash which might develop into a major battle.

The London radio reported that the German invasion columns had been "heavily reinforced"—presumably by troops released by the collapse of Yugoslavia—but that "the enemy advance has been slowed down."

"Greek troops and the British empire forces are now in contact with the enemy along the whole

FURIOUS: Londoners Demand Berlin Bombing After Raid

(By United Press)

LONDON—Londoners came up fighting mad today after the heaviest Nazi air attack of the war and chalked on the walls of their shattered buildings furious demands to "Bomb Berlin tonight. . . . Show them we can murder too."

Never had London been pounded as hard as in the attack which opened at mid-evening last night and continued its crashing course until the early hours before dawn today.

The toll of lives and property was great, and it was reflected in anger today as fires were dampened down and exhausted emergency crews searched in the mounds of debris for the trapped, wounded and dead.

Everywhere in the great British metropolis today could be seen crude scrawls chalked on the sidewalks and on the walls of buildings that had been made hollow shells by Nazi bombs.

The legends repeated with endless variations a single theme: "Bomb Berlin . . . bomb Berlin . . . bomb Berlin."

Despite weight of the attack, by mid-afternoon the city had been restored to something like normal—normal for war-time in a metropolis subjected to repeated bomb attacks.

Most famous casualties of the raid were Lord Stamp, the noted economist and his wife. But there were many others. Thousands mourned dead or wounded relatives. Tens of thousands were homeless.

At least five of the raiders were brought down by the pounding anti-aircraft batteries and night fighter planes.

Measles Increase In City at Rate Of 20 Cases a Day

At the rate of 20 cases a day, measles this week continued to strike at children in Mansfield homes. Dr. R. C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, estimated that approximately 350 cases had been reported since the beginning of the month.

Rehder said that the cases are occurring in the city twice as fast as in the county. Of the 322 reported up until Tuesday, 212 were children from Mansfield while 110 were from the county.

This month's total to date brings the 1941 amount up to more than 435 cases. Eighty-four were reported in March and only one prior to that month.

Rehder reported 75 cases in the first ten days of the month. Since then the number has increased at a faster rate.

Rehder said it was too soon to attempt to estimate when the epidemic will reach its peak. He said it might be reached late this month or might go on into May.

Steel Industry Decides to Fight Price Freezing Order

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The steel industry has decided to contest in court the order of Federal Price Administrator Leon Henderson which froze steel prices at the 1941 quarter level, it was learned today.

Officials of the industry, it was said, are canvassing the steel companies in an attempt to find one—preferrably a small one—that will file a test case in court.

Meanwhile, most of the major steel companies were expected to seek exemption from Henderson's order.

Henderson, in issuing the sensational order to check inflation and stabilize the American cost of living, left his door open for such appeals even though he said that the steel industry could not advance prices because of the fact that it had given its workers nearly $100,000,000 annual wage increases.

Henderson, who heads President Roosevelt's new office of price administration and civilian supply, said that some adjustments may be made if it is shown that the wage increases actually boost the basic cost of steel. But such a step will be taken only after "thorough investigation," he said.

At the same time, however, Henderson let it be known that he would "get tough" if the steel industry attempts to defy his price edict. His office advisers

URGE ACTION

CIO Union Representatives March on State House.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— A delegation of between 200 and 300 representatives from CIO unions today crowded on the state house to urge action on bills to liberalize unemployment compensation benefits.

Silvey said the bill apparently had become stalemated. It has been pending in committees for more than eight weeks.

Wants Apartment Moved or $8,000 In Property Damages

The new Frankel apartments at West Fourth street and West Park boulevard were involved in a second court action today when the owner of two adjoining s filed a suit in common pleas court for an order to force the owners to move the apartment building and garage and an $8,000 damage judgment if they are not removed.

The action, filed as an answer and cross-petition to a suit filed March 21 by Samuel and Ada Frankel, owners of the apartments, contends that the building was erected in a restricted residential section and has depreciated the value of other properties in the area.

Atty. Marshall C. Moore filed the cross-petition for Mrs. Jennie E. Lime of Perrysville, owner of two lots south of the apartments.

Owners of the building, admitting it is in a restricted area, previously asked the court for a declaratory judgment clarifying their position and permitting them to operate the building without interference from other property owners in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Lime contends in her petition that she protested to the owners when she learned they were erecting the apartment building, but they continued with building operations despite her protests.

She said a 10-car garage near her properties "destroys the view and causes inconvenience because of the noise, dirt, and unpleasant odors emanating from it."

The Frankels contended in their previous action that they did not learn of the building restrictions in the area until the building had been erected.

WITH MUSIC: Americans Hear Records Amid Blast of Bombs

Editor's Note: The following story is by Eddy Gilmore, formerly of the Associated Press Washington staff, known for his stories on the lighter side of politics and government. He transferred to the foreign service last January. This piece was written at the height of last night's bomb attack on London.

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON —(AP)— If my heart would just get out of my mouth for a few minutes, perhaps I could write this story.

Outside, the dorning sounds like 50,000 bumble bees.

Our phonograph is blaring "Night and Day," but it doesn't do any good.

There's an ear-splitting wham from across the street—a 20-foot door blown down. All the doors along both sides of the street are open. The locks were cracked by the force of the blast.

Oh well, nothing I can do about it.

The old phonograph now is beating Daddy Eight to the Bar but that doesn't help much either. Sounds like 80 guns just went off at once nearby.

This old house just shook like a dog after a swim. Dust that's been dormant for years fills the room.

It's getting so that when somebody sneezes everyone else jumps. In a rain of bombs, any strange noise makes you jump. We sit, waiting.

My roommate and co-worker, Tom Yarbrough, from Chickasha, Okla., decides to don his helmet and go out to see what's happening.

Another AP man, Al Wall, who comes from Longmont, Colo., changes the record to "Get Away Old Man," and one of the boys

Mrs. Ruckman Feted at Party Given By Three

For the pleasure of Mrs. Jerald Ruckman, the former Eileen Miller, was the party and miscellaneous shower given Wednesday evening by Mrs. Vern Cairns, Mrs. James Steckert and Mrs. J. S. Ruckman at the latter's home, 465 West Fourth street. Sixteen were in attendance for a social evening of games and contests. Prizes were won by Miss Mary Holmes, Miss Eve Hager, Miss Elizabeth Frisch and Mrs. John Miller, who presented them to the bride.

The hostesses gave her a gift of furniture. Later a luncheon was served at one long table which was dainty in pink and white appointments. A large umbrella in the pastel colors was suspended over the table and streamers in pink and white were stretched from it to each place.

Taps Girls Club Observe First Anniversary Here

The first anniversary of the Taps Girls club of the Tappan Stove company was observed with a dinner party at North Lake park pavilion on Tuesday evening. Thirty-two members and four guests were seated at a U-shaped table which was centered with spring floral arrangements and eight lighted tapers. Dainty Easter bonnets were given as favors and individual birthday cakes were presented to each one.

Following the dinner Miss Hazel Wagaman, the newly elected president, presented the program which consisted of a reading by Marguerite Sevan, musical selections by a trio composed of Catherine Stevenson, Miriam Bauer and Erna Shenk. Movies and talks were given by P. R. Tappan and Alan Tappan, who told of their recent trips.

Guests in attendance included Mr. and Mrs. Alan Tappan, P. R. Tappan and Miss Ernestine Craig of Cincinnati. Miss Emma Beck and Miss Irene Rees were in charge of the general arrangements. The next meeting of the club will be held May 13 with Mrs. Frona Ulery and Mrs. Dolly Deeds as hostesses.

ACCEPT OFFER

Low Grade Students at Hunter College Dismiss Selves.

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Taking advantage of the offer to those students at Hunter College who have not met the minimum standards of the college to withdraw voluntarily, after evaluating their scholastic records, 210 day session students retired at the beginning of the semester.

For the first time, students instead of waiting to be dismissed, voluntarily withdrew if their scholarship requirements were under the C minus average required of sophomores, juniors, and seniors, the D plus required of upper freshmen, and the D required of the lower freshmen.

Mary Blenden James Lehn, registrar, pointed out that the rate of dismissals and withdrawals from Hunter College is low as compared with other institutions. About 40 per cent of withdrawals at Hunter are "scholarship drops," more than half of which occur at or before the end of the freshman year, while withdrawals for unstated reasons are about 3 per cent.

IRONCLAD SHIP OF CIVIL WAR TO BE RETIRED

Famous Farragut Warship Saw Service in Battle of Mobile Bay.

NEW ORLEANS—(U.P.)—The old Union ironclad Chickasaw, hero warship of the Battle of Mobile Bay, is well past the allotted three score-and-ten years, and is fighting its last, losing battle.

The once proud Chickasaw, whose battering guns assured Admiral David Farragut of victory at Mobile in 1864, now is in danger of losing a prosaic job as a railroad ferry on the Mississippi river between New Orleans and McDonaghville, La.

The 970-ton vessel, which is one of the most famous castoffs of the U. S. fleet, was built near the beginning of the Civil War. It was one of the fleet of three ironclads and 14 wooden warships which Farragut led into battle off Mobile.

And it was the Chickasaw that did the most telling fighting in that encounter. When the Confederate armored ram, the Tennessee, threatened to smash the 14 wooden warships in Farraguts fleet into submission, the Chickasaw turned its guns onto the Tennessee and forced the Confederate ship to surrender.

In an hour of bombardment, the Chickasaw's 11-inch smooth-bore guns threw 52 solid balls that were direct hits on the Tennessee.

When the war ended, the Chickasaw was tied up on the Mississippi at McDonaghville, then called Gouldsboro by railroad men. Later, it was bought from the government and placed in railroad ferry service on the river.

The warship's name was changed to the Gouldsboro. The revolving turrets and four guns were stripped off. White the ship had cost the government around $500,000, she was sold at auction for $8,350 before going into ferry service.

Now, the Gouldsboro isn't even a full-time ferry. It is classed as an auxiliary, and carries freight and passenger cars across the river only when traffic is heaviest. It shows no obvious signs to the layman of being a retired warship, and only the covered side-wheels are the outstanding signs of the ship's age.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is expected to cause retirement of the Gouldsboro. The Texas and Pacific Railway, whose cars the old boat transports, has applied to the ICC for discontinuance of railroad ferry service here and wants to use the big new Huey P. Long Bridge instead. The ICC examiner who conducted a hearing has recommended that the application be granted.

WELCOME! FUSSY BUYERS!

Who are we to complain about a buyer being "too fussy?" You can't blame anyone for being careful how he spends his money on a used car.

Some of our oldest and best customers are those who came to us first as fussy used car buyers. We told 'em we were human, and occasionally made a mistake—but we did stand behind every car sold.

We took 'em through our shop and showed what we do in the way of conditioning to make every used car sweet-running and sweet-looking.

We'll be glad to do the same for you—whether you're from Missouri. The League of Fussy Buyers, or just interested to see what's what.

Drop in! We'll appreciate your visit!

STEELS LEAD SLOW RETREAT IN MART TODAY

War Dispatches, 'Freezing' of Prices Cited as Cause For Stumbling.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Steels today led the stock market on a slow retreat.

Slackness of offerings from the start was encouraging to those who contend the market may have discounted much of the bad news now appearing.

Principal stumbling blocks, brokers said, were bearish war dispatches and action of the government late yesterday in "freezing" steel prices in the wake of a widespread wage boost in this industry.

Prominent losers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Crucible Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, United Aircraft and Allied Chemical.

Rails, utilities, oils and coppers were relatively narrow. Among the few resistant spots were Sears Roebuck, American Smelting and Phelps Dodge.

Bonds and commodities displayed irregular tendencies.

BOARD STUDIES PLAN TO CHANGE PLUMBING CODE

Proposal Would Ease City's Regulations; Follows Case Against County Worker.

The Mansfield Board of Health was today considering several suggestions which would ease regulations in the city's plumbing code. The suggestions were offered at its latest meeting in a letter from City Solicitor M. D. Ward, jr.

Ward, who recently asked the dismissal of a case against a county employe charged with violation of the code on the grounds of "insufficient evidence" suggested that the board repeal certain divisions of the code restricting plumbing activities by unlicensed plumbers.

Also being considered, but not by Ward's suggestion, were proposals for increases in the plumbing certificate renewal fees. The increases would probably be used to help pay for the salary increase asked by the master plumbers and Dr. Roy Rehder, city-county health commissioner, at a previous meeting for Fred Hague, plumbing inspector.

The increase would call for a raise from $2,000 to $2,500 and also for the payment of the inspector's transportation expenses. In addition to funds which the health department wishes to appropriate toward's Hague's salary rise, added revenue is being considered by an increase in plumbing certificate renewal fees and permits for reinspection.

The board is considering the following fee increases: Renewal fees for master plumbers, $25 to $37.50; renewals for journeyman plumbers, $3 to $4.50, and renewals for sewer tappers, $5 to $7. The fee for reinspection made necessary by the failure of the plumber or sewer tapper to have the work ready for the inspection man when so reported or by faulty or improper installation would be raised from $2 to $5 for each inspection.

The suggestions made by Ward also included one which urged the board to repeal part of the code extending its authority to apply to all installations outside of the city where any building is connected with the city water or sewage system.

Ward opposed a clause concerning certificates of competency which provided that no person other than a licensed master or journeyman plumber or sewer tapper be allowed to do any plumbing work except owners who may exercise his constitutional right. He pointed out that a business house or manufacturer should be allowed the right to have his employes do whatever work he wished.

The city solicitor recently asked dismissal of a charge against Anton Moritz, Richland courthouse custodian, who was charged with violation of the plumbing code, after installing two water heaters in the basement of the county jail. He made his request because of the "lack of sufficient evidence."

RAY RELIEF

Doctor Advises X-Ray For Sinus Trouble.

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— American doctors are urged by a Jefferson hospital physician to make greater use of the X-ray in treating sinus trouble.

Too many medical men, intimated Dr. Karl Kornblum, prescribe surgery before trying the "magic lamp" on sinus sufferers.

X-rays, he explained, usually have beneficial effects on all inflammatory lesions and generally produce relief in most cases of sinus trouble. The rays relieve these ailments by acting on the white corpuscles which cause swelling and inflammation, Dr. Kornblum said.

NAZIS SMASH LONDON WITH BIGGEST RAID

Death, Ruin Follow Eight-Hour Drenching of City With Explosives.

front line in northern Greece," the radio said.

Berlin said German motorized units knifing into the mountains of Grecian Thessaly had "pushed deep into enemy columns, forcing the Greek and British troops to fight."

The Germans were reported attacking the Allied center and the right flank, in the Mt. Olympus sector, and heavy fighting was in progress in many sectors with the Allies moving up reinforcements to the threatened areas.

The London war office said it had no confirmation of Nazi reports that the Germans had pierced the Allied line south of Mt. Olympus.

On the North African front, the Germans said Axis troops had smashed repeated attempts by British armored cars to break through Nazi-Fascist siege forces around Tobruk, Libya, and had inflicted "terrific" losses among the British.

The British reported notable success in a drive to choke off the "feed line" shuttling troops and supplies to the Axis from Sicily to Tripoli. In London, the admiralty said the British fleet had destroyed an entire Axis convoy of three Italian destroyers and five military cargo ships attempting to slip across the 90-mile stretch of water.

British troops in North Africa were reported to have struck back heavily at the Axis invaders in counter-attacks at Fort Capuzzo near the Egyptian-Libyan border and at Salum, just inside Egypt. They were supported in these actions by British warships lying offshore.

In Greece, British and Greek troops fought furiously to stem the drive of two German columns attempting to outflank the Allies' entrenched positions.

The Greek high command acknowledged that two German columns had crossed the Aliakmon river 60 miles south of the Yugoslav border, to strike at the center of the defense front and another was hurled at the British right flank pegged on Mt. Olympus.

Berlin military sources said that the engagement near Olympus may develop into a major battle.

Italian troops driving northward from Albania were said to have breached Yugoslav border defenses near Scutari, advancing 'many kilometers" up the Adriatic coast, with Yugoslav troops retreating before them.

Premier Mussolini's high command said Italian troops had captured Cetinje, Yugoslavia, and was pushing northward to meet a south-bound Fascist motorized column in a drive to cut the Yugoslavs off from the Adriatic sea.

In Albania, the high command said, Italian forces have recaptured the town of Klisura, which fell to the Greeks Jan. 10.

Fascist press dispatches also reported the capture of Podgobica, Yugoslavia, eight miles from the Albanian frontier, east of Lake Scutari.

Newsman Injured In London Raid

LONDON—(INS)—Merrill Mueller, staff correspondent for International News Service, was a minor casualty of the terrific air raid unloosed by the German air force upon London last night.

Detonation of a high explosive bomb hurled Mueller, who was covering the raid in the open streets, against a stone wall. Bits of gravel and stone and glass splinters from windows smashed by the bomb entered Mueller's left eye.

Rescue workers took him to a casualty station where, after emergency treatment, he was permitted to return to work. He was otherwise unhurt and his eyes were pronounced in perfect shape after the treatment.

Car In Which Lexington Woman Was Killed

Lexington residents examine the car which carried Mrs. Alice Denius, 60, of near Lexington, to her death yesterday when it was struck by a freight train at a grade crossing in Lexington. The front of the car was completely destroyed by the crash which threw it over a 40-foot embankment. Mrs. Denius' death was the 12th traffic fatality in the county this year.

yells, "that's a swell theme song, keep on playing it."

Again the old house shimmies and shakes and the lights dim and slowly become bright again. For a half hour there's more of the same, then Varbrough returns.

"What see?" asks Bill Giblen of the American Red Cross.

"Too much," Tom replies. "Bad hit just around the corner."

"Anybody hurt?"

"Yep."

I decide to take a look for myself, but I can't find my tin hat. Wall lets me take his. A little small, but any old hat in a storm.

I wade through crunching glass to the corner and to the next corner. Flames are shooting high in the air.

Then comes a bomb whistle—and the only possible protection in sight is a stone post.

I flatten myself against it and for a second, a strange feeling comes over me. The post has four sides. Where will the bomb strike?

Too late now, the bomb has already struck, solving the worry of the moment.

Shrapnel splashes in the street as I hot-foot it for a doorway. Made it! And from the dark a voice asks "where you from?"

"The United States," I reply.

"Come in and get some real coffee" says an elderly woman wearing a tin hat. "I was born in New York."

Coffee never tasted better.

Back home and to the typewriter. . . . It's still night in London. Dawn ought to be along in a little while.

FILM MAGNATE FOUND GUILTY

Joseph Schenck Convicted of Income Tax Evasion By Federal Jury.

The jury, which deliberated for 10 hours before returning their verdict at 2:30 a. m. this morning, found the two executives not guilty on a fourth indictment charging conspiracy.

Judge Grover M. Moscowitz set April 24 as the date he will impose sentence and entertain motions. Schenck, who was in the courtroom when the jury of 10 men and two women returned the verdict, showed no visible signs of emotion when the findings were read.

The jury, which obtained the case after six weeks of testimony, found Schenck, who paid income taxes of $52,509.86 in 1935, should have paid $242,005.17, a difference of $189,495.31. The jurors also found Schenck and Muskowitz guilty of defrauding the government of $64,197.31 in 1936, the year in which Schenck paid a $257,636.85 income tax.

became confused after her car stalled on the tracks and was unable to escape the crash.

Other witnesses told patrolmen that the car "bounced like a rubber-ball" before rolling down the embankment. The left front of the car was completely demolished in the accident.

Mrs. Denius was returning from a shopping trip in Mansfield at the time of her death. She was driving west on Route 42 and was hit by a southbound train.

Survivors are her husband, O. T. Denius of the Lexington-Fredericktown road; and a brother, Charles Irish of Cleveland. The body was taken to the Snyder funeral home in Lexington. Funeral plans have not been completed.

Mrs. Flora Mader, Galion R. D. 1, was treated by a Galion physician for arm and leg injuries yesterday afternoon after an automobile driven by Mrs. Nellie Farley, Crestline R. D. 2, crashed into a spring wagon in which Mrs. Mader was riding on Millsborough road, three miles east of Galion.

Deputy Sheriff G. C. Humphrey said Mrs. Mader was thrown out of the wagon by the impact. Ray Balliett, Galion R. D. 2, who was riding with Mrs. Mader, escaped injury.

In another county accident, Victor Polowski, 21, of Smithville, suffered cuts and bruises about the left leg when his car was forced into a ditch on Route 30 about three miles east of Mansfield. Polowski told highway patrolmen that another motorist cut in on his car on a down grade and that his auto crashed when he swerved to avoid a collision. He was treated at the General hospital and released.

An automobile-truck collision in Cincinnati fatally injured Philip C. Phillips, 70, of West Chester.

Mrs. Sue McMillen, 70, of Jefferson, died in an Ashtabula hospital of injuries received Sunday when an automobile overturned.

GERMAN ARMY RULES FRANCE

Dominates Life and Politics as Ex-Premier Waits 'His Chance.'

France today is the presence of this enormous German army. All things political begin and end there. All other considerations, brave intentions, hatred of the conquerors, Marshal Petain, Weygand, everything else, are dwarfed by comparison.

And, sitting there in Paris, darkly smouldering with anger and humilation, and hungering for revenge, is one of the toughest and shrewdest of Frenchmen, who is well aware of this fact. He is Pierre Laval. He knows that nothing else counts as long as the German army is in France.

"I realize the public is solidly against me," Laval told a friend recently, "but I don't give a damn (je m'en fous). As long as the German army is here, I don't care if I don't even have one per cent of the public behind me."

"Then you plan to use the German army as Hitler used the Brown Shirts, is that it?" he was asked.

"Well, yes—if you want to put it that way," said Laval.

Laval is as full of confidence as he is full of hate and vindictiveness and he talks with astonishing frankness these days. He openly admits now he has been betting on fascism for years and is completely convinced of its ultimate victory.

"I saw back in 1935 that the coming fight in Europe was the fight between Fascism and Bolshevism," he said. "I chose then for Fascism. I am as convinced today as I ever was that we will win. The victory must be complete. There must be no compromise. England must be crushed forever. That done, I see France taking her rightful place in Europe—the first Latin power."

He made this declaration at the height of the Italian reverses in Africa and Albania.

Laval is certain of his return to power; he is just waiting for the right moment. If he can arrange with his German supporters for the release of some of the 1,800,000 French prisoners, or the betterment of their conditions, he may even return with some popularity.

But he has blood in his eye. He makes no secret of the fact that heads will fall when he reassumes power. He has the names of those who aided in his ousting Dec. 13, and he has sworn to have the hide of every one of them.

He realizes these rough games work both ways. He frankly admits he is as good as dead if the British win, and that he may be assassinated before either side wins. But whatever else may be said about Black Peter Laval, he cannot be accused of being a physical coward.

It is an odds-on bet around Vichy that he will be assassinated. I personally have heard men vow that he won't come back to Vichy and live.

Laval heartily reciprocates Marshall Petain's hatred for him. He speaks scornfully of his old chief as a doddering ancient whose mental faculties have grown dim.

"The Great Dictator," is eventful for it gives Chaplin his first talking role. STEEL TO FIGHT PRICE FREEZING

Industry Seeks Small Company To Begin Court Contest Over Federal Order.

were asked what steps Henderson would take if steel companies went ahead and increased prices without getting exemptions from him. Henderson sent out word through them that "I'll get tough."

Henderson holds vast powers to enforce the order, even to the point of seizing a plant or running a firm out of business.

Henderson acted after steel companies, partly at demands from the CIO, gave approximately 500,000 workers wage increases of 10 cents an hour. As a result of the wage increases, steel company spokesmen said that price advances might be necessary.

The price control administrator moved before the steel companies could post new prices. He banned the advances, he said, "because a steel price increase at this time might touch off a general increase in the cost of living and start the country off to price inflation."

His action came after OPM Purchasing Director Donald M. Nelson also said he was opposed to blanket increases in the price of steel. Nelson warned, too, that it might be necessary to fix price maximums in other industries, particularly textiles and leather.

Meanwhile, Henderson's action brought speculation as to whether it would complicate the labor situation, which has been marked in the last few months by many national defense strikes. It was pointed out that capital might be more reluctant to grant wage increases because of the indications that the government would not allow subsequent price raises.

Henderson expressed belief that most of the cost of the wage boosts in steel might be covered by lower production costs and other factors growing out of the business boom. He pointed out that the government was "the largest customer of steel." It was estimated that the steel industry has approximately $2,000,000,000 of direct government contracts.

MAMMOTH NEW TAX PLANNED

Morgenthau Says Nation Will Seek To Collect Three and Half Billions.

coming fiscal year, beginning July 1, will be about $19,000,000,000. Two-thirds of that is $12,667,000,000. We figure that existing taxes, after adding $1,000,000,000 to previous estimates on account of better business, will bring us $9,223,000,000, leaving us $3,444,000,000 short of the amount of taxes we ought to raise."

The secretary said he did not know how the tax program compared with previous ones, but he felt it was safe to say that it might be the largest in the world.

Congressional leaders at the meeting told reporters that Morgenthau would speak for them and gave no independent comments.

Even after the unprecedented new taxes are levied, Morgenthau continued, the treasury will have to borrow about $500,000,000 a month to keep up with the huge expenditures for defense and the lease-lend program.

"An ideal way to raise this money," Morgenthau said, "would be to increase everybody's tax by one-third."

He indicated, however, that a portion of the new taxes probably would be raised from persons who paid no federal taxes this year.

While the major purpose of the new taxes will be to pay for expenditures, Morgenthau said another and "very important reason" was to prevent rapidly rising prices and a consequent inflation. He meant that the more money the government takes away from people in the form of taxes, the less money people will have available for competitive purchases which might cause price rises.

This brought up the question of whether the administration no longer would oppose forms of taxation which restricted consumer purchasing power such as sales taxes. The secretary declined to answer a direct question on this point and asked that he not be pressed on the point at this time.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, THURSDAY, APRIL 17, 1941.

An important thing for Americans right now is to know what is going on in the world.

It may be well to remember that the old adage is, "Strike while the IRON is hot"—not the TEMPER.

Visiting schoolgirls report they saw cobwebs in the White House—so, anytime now, there may be an installment captioned "My Busy Day."

From France Direct To You

YOU who have wondered about France, and pondered conditions which brought that once great nation to its present plight, will find no better source of first-hand information than the series of articles by Kenneth Downs, International News Service staff correspondent, the first of which was in yesterday's News-Journal.

Back to Lisbon, after spending five weeks in unoccupied and occupied France, Downs has written an intensely interesting and revealing story of Nazi-dominated France and the helplessness of the 95 per cent majority to circumvent the controlling minority.

Interest in the Downs articles is increased by the fact that he gave a talk in Mansfield last year, soon after his previous return from Europe, on conditions at that time, and the present series may be regarded as a continuation of the narrative.

When it is considered that informed observers are comparing present conditions in the United States with those which existed in France immediately preceding that nation's downfall, the importance of every American becoming fully informed on the causes of the French debacle cannot be overemphasized.

In yesterday's article describing the pro-Nazi five per cent in France, Downs said: "They are aggressive, ambitious men who have bet not only their careers but their very lives on German victory. They will stop at nothing to see England defeated."

There you also have a picture of the little un-American groups engaged in subversive activities in this country—foreign agents who aspire to positions of power in the totalitarian regime which they hope to substitute for American democracy.

Read the articles by Kenneth Downs—and while you are reading them, THINK!

Always Considerate of Others

AMONG the many fine attributes of David W. Cummins was his natural friendliness and his unfailing consideration for others. Firm in his own convictions, Judge Cummins graciously granted everyone else the privilege of conflicting opinions and maintained an admirable poise even when surrounded by heated arguments on controversial subjects.

Nor can it be recalled that he ever said an unkind word about anyone, it seeming to have been among his fixed rules to remain silent unless some good could be said of a person.

It may also be said, for the enlightenment of younger persons who may question that possibility, that Judge Cummins passed through many years of political activity, including candidacy and election to public office, without being sullied by that sometimes dangerous environment.

If emphasis was placed by Judge Cummins on one particular phase of life, it was development of the spiritual, rather than the material, that he deemed most worthwhile, and it was in his exemplification of the teachings and practices of true Christianity that he made deepest impress upon all who knew him.

He will be missed from his place in the church where he has long been a familiar figure, as well as from his other community associations, but the inspiration of his way of life will long continue as an influence to those seeking the path to contentment built on faith.

Grass Fires Dangerous

ATTENTION has been forcefully directed, during the past few days, to the danger and damage of grass fires, either in the city or country.

An article in yesterday's News-Journal quoted H. E. Hecker, superintendent of the Rocky Fork CCC camp, to the effect that boys in the camp had been frequently called upon to aid in extinguishing grass fires that got out of control in that vicinity. Mr. Hecker also explained the damage done to pasture and woodlots by burning-over the land.

A number of instances have been cited within the past couple of weeks in which the careless handling of fires has been responsible for considerable damage, with homes and other buildings threatened.

Today's installment of "A Farmer's Diary," elsewhere on this page, is devoted to a recital of personal experience of the writer in requiring aid to battle a grass fire.

If, as has been said, "A burned child fears the fire," it might seem that unburned adults might also profit by reading and observation instead of risking the penalties of carelessness.

Preparedness Must Come First

MANY Americans were puzzled, a few days ago, when the president announced that he was greatly enlarging the program for production of powder, shells and other war materials. There were to be one hundred more plants built and $2,000,000,000 appropriated for the purpose.

At the moment, when the European situation seemed favorable, it looked excessive. But the winds of war shift quickly. There is uncertainty now in the Balkans, in the Mediterranean, in Africa, in the Atlantic. People are asking anxiously: "Can Britain come back? Can Britain hold out? Where does it leave us? What are we going to do?"

Such questions cannot be answered now. All we can do is to keep our heads, work hard and be prepared for anything.

Reports that Indian population is increasing leads Harry Wade, Detroit News paragrapher, to suggest that the Vanishing American is now Lo, the Poor Millionaire.

The Byrd expedition's monster snowmobile is to be left in the Antarctic—possibly as a defense nucleus in the event of attempted invasion.

About 'Human Nature'

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

IT'S STUPID to say that "human nature doesn't change."

It is true that human beings have certain basic attributes which we've had since Adam was a pup. We're afraid, we're greedy, envious, lazy and amorous. But despite these fundamental makings, Homo Sap, Model 1941 A. D., is no more like old Grampa Bearclaws of 5000 B. C. than a humming bird is like an ichthyornis—or a Diesel engine like a hand-hewn plough.

And the reason's obvious. Little Snookums isn't simply what Papa and Mama make him. He's what his whole environment, the tests and tempo of his times make him. The low-browed, hairy little creature who drowses in the back of some prehistoric family cave, lulled by the slow rhythm of untamed jungle life, learning slowly to comprehend and face the simple program of jungle society, is far removed from tiny Two-Gun Johnny of 1941 who knows the make of every car and plane about the time he cuts his first tooth; who steps high, wide and handsome to the whoopee of the Machine Age on his first airing.

They both have "human nature" of course. They both are endowed with fear, cowardice and conceit, greed, envy and laziness. But the world around them is so infinitely different, the tests they must face are so vastly changed, that they might as well—were it not for the spiritual plan behind them — be completely different animals.

Nor do you need to go back to 5,000 B. C. to find this difference. Just take a good long look at Uncle Ed or Aunt Emmy, or even at the Mom and Dad who so justly deserve the adoration they receive. With all due respect to their manifold virtues, Ed and Emmy, Mom and Dad, are usually behind their times 500 years. The world of their youth was a placid millpond in comparison with the wild rumpus going on today. The standards they respected, for all their integrity, are as antiquated as an extinct bird.

This doesn't mean that they were not good, honest, reliable, hard working people. It simply means that they had to adjust themselves to an infinitely simpler, slower, safer, kindlier world than we face today. And weren't shoved around before their ankles hardened.

Meaning what? Meaning that human nature does change. It changes profoundly with the demands of its environment. And the morals — yes, even the etiquette—which seemed so important in the last generation, can't even be found in the bargain basement today. The Eternal Verities may and do endure, but if they can't adapt themselves to the altered, quickened moods of their times, they're due for a blitzkrieg.

Human nature does change. And it's worse than stupid to ignore this fact: it's vicious. For you can't understand any human unless you see him in relation to his background. It's both unfair and idiotic to appraise Young America against a horse-car environment. Or to think that Ellen Mae should thrill over making piccalilli, Mom, just because you did 'way back in 1904.

Decency does go on. The urge that lifted the first faltering protoplasm from the primeval ooze still sends men on to new and greater heights. But it wears a new shape, speaks a new tongue, gives off new vibrations, with every change in its surroundings. And unless you can realize and respect this fact, stranger, you're a flop and a fade-out, despite all your fine theories.

April Is a Maiden

—By HELEN LOOMIS LINHAM

Beauty burns a soft and lovely light,
And spins a golden web for willing feet
And laughter like a tinkling bell and bright,
Runs swiftly on the breeze that I meet.
And, too, I hear an emerald melody
In arching trees new-leafed and sweet with spring,
And beauty takes my hand that I may see
Each bud, each bird each simply lovely thing.
My feet feel softly of the waking sod,
My eyes see tapestries of pink and blue,
And in the grasses baby flowers nod,
Their fragrant petals strung with morning dew.
And beauty trips, a lovely maiden dressed
With daffodils against her firm young breast.

Timely Editorial

McGuffey Memorial.

One of the hardiest and most loyal of all cults is that of the admirers of the late William Holmes McGuffey, the educator-anthologist whose sole but entirely adequate claim on his fellow-Americans' regard is his compilation of the series of common-school readers bearing his name.

Although he has been dead nearly 70 years, his name and his service to American culture are commemorated by McGuffey clubs in many states, principally in the Middle West. Incidentally the first McGuffey club was founded in Columbus in 1905 by John F. Carlisle, local attorney and in 1935 a national federation of clubs was affected.

The work of the Federal Association of McGuffey Societies is to be made concrete with the dedication of a $10,000 sculptured memorial on June 14 at its permanent site on the campus of Miami university, Oxford, Ohio, a location selected because it was while teaching there that the first McGuffey reader was compiled.—Columbus Dispatch.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Press Censorship Gains Ground In Defense Agencies and Navy

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Today, as the foremost editors of the nation gather in Washington for their annual conference, the most important question before them is government news censorship.

So far the authors of this column have not been among those who thought the New Deal was attempting to throttle the press. In fact, we have contended that press relations under the Roosevelt administration have been the freest in history, completely devoid of attempts to high-pressure publishers into firing independent newsmen—a policy of the previous administration.

Even today—and this column is not written without rubbing shoulders daily with many government officials—we find most of official Washington completely devoid of censorship. However, there are certain notable exceptions.

These exceptions are: the navy; certain sections of the Office of Production Management and other defense agencies; and the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

It should be noted that when we use the word "censorship" we refer only to information to which the public is entitled, not to confidential matters or military secrets.

Who Works for U. S.?

FOR INSTANCE, there is no reason why the public should not know who are the dollar-a-year men working for the government. There never has been any secrecy before about the identity of government employes or government voluntary advisers.

However, when we asked for this list several months ago it was at first refused. Later it was stated that the information would be given only if a written request was made—a highly unusual procedure in Washington, where a mere list of government servants is considered automatically public property.

Last week the OPM finally, on its own initiative, made public a complete enumeration of dollar-a-year men on its staff.

Similarly, we were refused a list of employes of Miss Harriet Elliott's Defense Consumer's Division and their salaries without a formal written request. In contrast, the traditional practice of established agencies such as the state and war departments is to publish the salaries of every official in the annual register.

Again, the RFC at first refused to reveal the salary of Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith's son-in-law, who is on its payroll; and it was forthcoming only after the question was put up to the RFC board and debated there.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, like the RFC, is ruled with an iron fist by Secretary Jesse Jones. Recently Carroll Wilson, executive of the Bureau, assembled all its employes and threatened them with "severe consequences" if they gave any information to newsmen about the sweeping re-organization now under way. One of the new officials Jones has brought into the bureau is Robert Fitz-Randolph Martin, former research director of the anti-New Deal National Association of Manufacturers.

Confused Red Tape.

HEIGHT of ridiculous censorship was the refusal of the National Defense commission to disclose the salary of Mrs. Margaret Holmead, daughter of William H. McReynolds, White House secretary, who had installed her as personnel director of the commission although she had no experience in this field.

In addition to this squeamishness about revealing facts to which the public is entitled, there has grown up a maze of red tape in the defense agencies which hampers and confuses the average reporter and has the effect of censorship.

The Office of Production Management, for instance, has some 30 different publicity agents, each in charge of a different section. A call to any of them is taken down in shorthand by a stenographer and transcribed for the OPM's permanent files.

Of an entirely different nature is the censorship exercised by the navy, which beyond doubt has become the most high-handed agency in Washington in its attitude toward the press.

In the suppression of certain kinds of information, such as naval secrets, the press is glad to co-operate. For months, nothing appeared in print about the new device for detecting the approach of airplanes, until isolationist Senator Nye made a speech about it. The press also has co-operated in protecting ship movements and the navy's new bombsight.

Censored Criticism.

IN RECENT weeks, however, the navy has gone further, has even threatened censorship as a means of protecting high naval officers from criticism. Navy brasshats have long been sensitive about press criticism, but have never brought such pressure to stop it as today.

Today, there is definite evidence that Naval Intelligence has been tapping telephone wires and shadowing newsmen who have unearthed news which the navy does not like. Even the FBI does not tap wires, as the result of a supreme court ruling.

Naval secrets are not involved, merely criticism of certain brasshats. And Naval Intelligence appears to be chiefly interested in the source of the information; in other words, what officers in the navy, or officials in other government agencies, have disclosed inefficiencies.

When this column revealed the fact that thirty of the navy's new destroyers were so top-heavy that they tended to turn turtle in the water, Naval Intelligence claimed that if had traced part of the news leak to a civilian engineer employed in a private company. And the admirals made it so hot for the firm which employed this engineer that he almost lost his job.

In this case, the navy did not deny that the destroyers were top-heavy. It admitted the truth of the story; but then tried to crack down on what it thought was the source. In other words, it did not want the taxpayer to know that his money, spent on brand new destroyers, had been partially wasted.

Knox and Mrs. Patterson.

THIS policy of news suppression was inherited by Republican Secretary of the Navy Colonel Knox. But he has done nothing to change it. If anything, he has increased it. And because he himself is a newspaper publisher, he knows the game.

One thing he apparently did not know, however, is that it is usually wiser to speak softly to a lady. Not long ago he was talking with Eleanor Patterson, red-headed publisher of the Washington Times-Herald, when she asked him about his newly initiated policy of suppressing news of ship movements.

"What about pictures of ships?" the lady publisher asked.

"If you publish a picture of a British ship in an American port," shot back the secretary of the navy, "I'll put you in jail."

A short time later, the battered British battleship Malaya arrived in New York harbor. Remembering Knox's threat, Mrs. Patterson slapped a picture of the ship on page one.

She has not yet gone to jail.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—This will win me no friends among the Pulitzer Award committee, but then the committee changes its rules and its collective mind so frequently anyway that even if it were fond of me today, it probably wouldn't think much of me tomorrow.

Early in May this committee will announce its selections for the best drama, best biography, best novel, best poetry, best news writing and political cartoons.

I would not care to hazard an opinion as to its novel or news reporting choices, but it seems to me that almost any drama selected will measure up to most of its previous selections, which, in the main, have been perplexing, not to say astonishing, and arrived at by a line of reasoning that can only be described as elastic.

For instance, there used to be a rule that dramatized novels would not be eligible for the award. But along came "The Old Maid," which had long been a novel before it became a play, and this rule was conveniently waived so "Maid" could win.

THEN there was a qualification that said a drama must be by an American and on an American theme, but Robert E. Sherwood then wrote "Idiot's Delight," an anti-Fascist drama with an Italian locale. The only thing American in it was a stranded Broadway hoofer who once had made love to a fortune-teller's stooge in Omaha, but the committee promptly gave "Idiot's Delight" the award. Fortunately, this play happened to be the plum of the Broadway crop, but it was about as American as a Siberian cheese.

Last year the committee went into its huddle, burned a few prayer papers, took a deep breath, and nominated William Saroyan's "Time of Your Life," which was indeed American and which was indeed written by an American of Armenian extraction.

There is a humorous incident said to have occurred in the life of the poet Browning. Someone asked him what he was driving at in one of his poems. Browning, so the anecdote goes, looked at it and said: "When I wrote it, only God and I knew what it meant. Now only God knows."

SO FAR as I am concerned, only God knows what possessed the committee to give "Time of Your Life" the award last year. I know most of the critics liked it and I am aware that Mr. Saroyan modestly told the world via coast to coast hook-up that he had written a masterpiece. But for the life of me, and for the lives of those people who saw the play with me, I can not understand how such a choice came to be made. There was nothing original in it and to me indeed it appeared to be a parody on the career of W. C. Fields. I am told the author had no such thing in mind. I don't for a minute think that he did. But the committee came, the committee saw, and while it was having the time of its life, Saroyan conquered.

Now we have a new season and a new crop of dramas and a new award to be made. There are some very excellent dramas on Broadway and some very cheesy ones. Personally, I can hardly wait.

A Farmer's Diary

Grass Fire

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

BRAMBLES and weedy grass were thick upon the slope where I plan to plant my peach orchard. To mark the rows for trees, we disked each several times, 16 feet apart, until the fresh dirt was plainly visible. We thought to burn the dead dry tangle in between—so the other afternoon my wife and I carefully tended backfires along the eastern hilltop. The flames crept down the hill toward the wind, but did not offer to cross the freshly disked places.

When a wide patch had burned, we thought it would be safe to light the rows at the bottom as well as the top, so we descended to the edge of the disked rows, and I dropped a match into the wiry grass. I sensed at once that I had made a mistake.

The wind was behind the flames, and they were going uphill. For a time we two fought breathlessly, side by side, in an effort to beat out the racing fire before it would spread around the end and go too far. Then I saw a sheet of flame leap across the eightfoot strip of stirred ground, and start up toward the scrubby chaparral at our woods' edge.

I dropped my shovel, shouted to my wife to keep out of danger's way, raced for my car, and ran to the village for help.

Everything was quiet in town. Breathless, I burst into the hardware store, where the fire chief does business. Immediately he closed his doors, ran to the engine house and blew the siren. The village came to life. Like magic, men appeared in the street and boarded the fire truck. Faces in every door and window, and on each peering face the question, "Where's the fire?"

At the edge of our field the firemen divided forces. Several men with knapsack sprayers and wet brooms kept the fire from spreading westward. I hauled milkcans of water to them, from our pond to refill the extinguishers. Around at the other side, the main truck with its corps of workers kept the flames from reaching a neighbor's woods and buildings.

Our slope was swept across by the searing flames. All night a few dead smoldering snags showed points of light across the expanse of hill. I came in when the fire was out, blackened and singed.

Next morning I walked across the burned area. Small trees had moist, blackened bases; greening shrubs had their bark burst wide open and sap dripped from the wounds. The thick leafy covering was gone from the woods floor and I walked on open soil that had not seen light for years.

A gray squirrel scolded as I passed. A meek frightened rabbit bounded away with accusing eyes. It seemed to say, "You are the one who destroyed my grassy home and my babies too." Beneath the soil, field mice squeaked their distress.

The firemen said they had a grass fire nearly every day. I know how all those other fellows feel, whose best intentions led them into trouble. Verily, "How great a matter a little fire kindleth."

MEXICANS SELL STRANGE HERBS TO TOURISTS

Oddities Offered For Sale at Historic Market Center In Juarez.

JUAREZ, Mexico—(U P)—At the historic Juarez market where Mexicans shop and where American tourists come to see strange products of Mexico's interior, peddlers and vendors offer herbs from Mexican soil that "will cure anything" even a broken heart.

In the tiny booths grizzled wise men do a thriving business in herbs and charms which they say their ancestors have found effective for centuries.

For a bad cold they offer a remedy the Mexican swears by. It's called yerba de vibora, or snake hair. A little green herb, it grows in the mountains. Brew a tea of yerba de vibora, mix it with sotol—potent Mexican alcoholic beverage—and the cold will disappear, the vendors assert.

For rheumatism, huachichile is recommended. Gourd tea is reportedly the best cure for chest ailments and tuberculosis. For a hangover, orange leaves mixed with—you guessed it—sotol, is supposed to be the best cure.

Barbas de elote, cornsilks in English, is widely used in brewing a remedy for kidney ailments. A herb called ruda is used for the earache. For stomach pains, merchants advise gordolobo (mullein). A herb called coleomeca is recommended for the blood.

Snakeskin — the real thing—is rubbed on leprosy victims. Savilla is supposed to be good for wounds, as is mole root for dandruff. The hair is dyed with the latter preparation, which is made from the organ cactus.

In affairs of love the herb doctors offer many remedies.

Peyote, a cactus seed, will make a boy friend care if worn in a sachet over the heart, vendors say. So will red beans carried in the same place.

A dried humming bird also is recommended as a love charm.

PITTSBURGH HIT BY FLOOD ECHO

Defense Industries Pass Up Area Because of Flood Danger.

PITTSBURGH -- (U P) — The memory of the great flood of 1936, which did extensive damage to industrial plants in the Pittsburgh district, has returned to haunt business executives and city authorities in their quest for new defense industries.

Army and navy officials, in charge of the defense industrial expansion plans, have intimated they are passing up this leading steel producing area in the location of new plants, partly because of the lack of suitable sites free from danger of flood waters.

Most recent example cited was the selection of Canton, O., as site of one of the two new gun plants which Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company will build and operate for the navy. Westinghouse is a Pittsburgh firm.

F. D. Newbury, manager of the company's emergency products division, who is directing defense production, explained that "every effort was made to place the plant in the Pittsburgh district.

"In fact," he added, "the project was delayed at least a month by our efforts to keep it here. But the simple truth is that we couldn't find a plot of 100 acres of level ground within 25 miles of the city which met the navy's requirements."

It was inferred that under military regulations for placing of new factories even land along Pittsburgh's three rivers which were not reached by the flood's 46-foot stage, was not considered 'safe' for defense industries.

DOCTOR URGES DAYLIGHT TIME AS HEALTH AID

Benefits Cited In Drive By Head of Wisconsin Medical Society.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. —(U.P.)— A stocky, energetic physician is leading a campaign to give Wisconsin an "extra" hour of sunlight during the summer months.

He is Dr. Ralph P. Sproule, Milwaukee. Dr. Sproule opened his drive for daylight saving time in his inaugural speech after his election as president of the Wisconsin Medical Society, and has been devoting vigorous effort to it ever since.

Dr. Sproule confines his arguments for daylight saving to those concerning what he believes to be its health value. He thinks that it promises economic advantages as well, however, and he has brought his campaign to the attention of various business groups.

Daylight saving, Dr. Sproule points out, would give most working people an opportunity to enjoy an extra hour daily of fresh air and sunlight. He believes the health advantages would be considerable. In support of his argument he cites a number of letters from health officials in large cities which have adopted daylight saving.

"The value of improved health to our national defense effort hardly can be overestimated," he said. "A healthy people is the backbone of national strength."

Reduction of traffic accidents is another result of daylight saving foreseen by the physician.

"Most serious accidents occur after dark," he pointed out. "Daylight saving would almost certainly result in fewer highway tragedies, since it would permit people to do more of their driving in the daytime."

Establishment of daylight saving in Wisconsin would require repeal of a law which prohibits it. The law was enacted in 1930 with the support of labor, farmer and theater groups.

New Type Hand Grenade Close Copy of Baseball.

FORT DIX, N. J.—(U.P.)—Assuming that the average American youth is a baseball player, the army has developed a new type hand grenade that resembles a baseball and weighs only one-quarter of an ounce more.

The grenade is made of light metal or plastic. It will be particularly effective against machine gun nests and similar small targets whose destruction requires accurate pitching. A supplementary detonator causes the grenade to explode if handled after it has been thrown.

Army officials explain that the regulation hand grenade is too heavy and is likely to throw the pitcher's arm out of joint if baseball technique is used

CHAPTER XXVIII

They visited the cathedral, the park, and finally took in a movie. The film was very old and the subtitles were in Spanish but it helped to pass the time. When they came out, they found that night had fallen. They walked leisurely back to the hotel. Dinner was never served until nine o'clock.

As they turned on to the long avendia which bordered the sea, one of the few automobiles they had seen turned the corner sharply.

"That man!" Joan cried "I have the strangest feeling I know him! I couldn't see him very well, but I'm sure of it"

"Maybe it's the man who was trying to get in touch with you," Thomas said. "Maybe it's one of Karl's men that you used to see around the club in San Francisco."

"That could easily be possible," Paul said.

"But I don't connect him with anyone at the club," Joan said puzzled. "It gives me the queerest feeling."

She was still worrying about it after dinner when Thomas announced that he was going to "do the town."

"Watch your step," Paul advised. "Don't get absent-minded and try to escape."

"Don't worry about it, Mr O'Malley! You've got me buffaloed. I'll stick around and watch the fireworks"

Joan went to bed early but she lay awake in the huge four-poster wondering about the man she had seen. Who was he? Why couldn't she place him? The roar of the sea and sweet night air filled the room. Moonbeams flitted across the stone floor like shimmering mist. She looked uneasily towards the old-fashioned door. She had locked and bolted it but it rattled in the wind

She was almost asleep when a sound disturbed her. Someone was tapping gently at her door. She sat up in bed. "Who's there-" she demanded.

No one replied. She drew on the colorful Mexican robe and slippers she had bought and tiptoed to the door. "Who's there?" she repeated.

Thomas's voice came to her. "It s me, miss. I've something to tell you"

Quickly she unbolted the door and snapped on the light. "What's the trouble?" she asked, annoyed. "Why don't you tell Mr. O'Malley whatever it is?"

"I can't," Thomas whispered, looking over his shoulder. "I've found a way to get out of here."

Joan eyed him coldly. "Have you been drinking?"

"Only a few," Thomas insisted. "Listen, Miss Leland, I met a man tonight who will take us back to the States. He's an American and he's flying back home tomorrow. He has his own plane and when I told him we were stranded . . ."

"You shouldn't have done that!"

"Maybe not, but I'm scared, Miss Leland. This guy is okay so I took a chance. He was swell about. Said he'd be glad to help us I told him I thought you'd be willing to go too and he wants to see you. He's downstairs right now"

"Paul will never consent to leave," Joan said slowly, "and I can't leave him. I don t blame you, Thomas, but you know Mr. O'Malley said it wasn't safe. However, if you want to go, I suppose it's all right"

"Now look, Miss Leland," Thomas begged. "At least go down and talk to this man. He's waiting for you. After all, he's been pretty decent about this whole thing. If you don't see him, he'll think there's something phony about it and he won't even take me"

Joan considered for a minute. "All right for your sake I'll see him. But I'm not going to leave. No one can persuade me."

"Okay," Thomas said hurriedly. "Just back me up on my story. That's all I ask"

He departed and Joan dressed quickly, thinking how strange it was that now that she had a chance to escape she could not take it. It was impossible to consider leaving Paul Even so, she could not blame Thomas. And if corroborating his story would help, she would be glad to do it. After all, he had given them all the aid possible on the ship.

She walked down the stone ramp to the dimly lit lobby. A man was waiting for her, a man who was at once familiar to her. It was the same man she had glimpsed in the car that afternoon from the street.

"Mr. Mulford!" she cried in surprise as she realized that was in truth her former employer who now rose smilingly to greet her.

"Joan! This is a surprise!" Arthur Mulford said.

"It is to me," she admitted. "I heard you were here. I even went so far as to ask the bartender for information about you, but I didn't connect you with Thomas"

"Possible. Now tell me, what is this all about?"

They both sat down on the deep leather chairs. "I suppose Thomas has explained the situation?"

Thomas was standing on the veranda smoking a cigaret, apparently preferring to let Joan do the talking.

"Yes," Mulford said with concern. "He tells me you are in danger of being recaptured by some gang. I must say it sounded a little fantastic."

"It's the truth," Joan said gravely. "After you discharged me I went to work at a night club, the Club Elite, owned by a Karl Miller. I learned later that he is head of a spy ring in this country. I also met Paul O'Malley, of the F. B. I., who is trying to get evidence against Karl. I promised to help him. Karl discovered it and kidnaped us We've been on board his freighter for several weeks. Finally we escaped."

"And why don't you leave Mazatlan?" Mulford inquired.

"Paul, that is, Mr. O'Malley, is still trying to run down the rest of the gang And he believes they are keeping tabs on us He is determined not to give up"

"Thomas seems quite willing to leave."

"Yes. He worked for Karl in return for Karl's promise to save his wife from a Nazi concentration camp," Joan said bitterly

"And you? Don't you want to go home?"

"Yes and no I want to leave —but not without Paul"

"Ah," Mulford said, "I see. But I will be glad to take all of you. I have my own plane, my own pilot, and I am returning to San Francisco tomorrow. Why not talk it over with him? Surely he can have no objection to your leaving since it will be absolutely safe."

Joan wavered. "I couldn't go without him But maybe he would be willing to go with us. He could get aid in the States and return to Mexico and continue the search. I'm not much help to him now, and neither is Thomas. What I really came down here to tell you, Mr. Mulford, was that what Thomas told you is the truth. He should have his chance to get out."

"I understand, and I'll take him of course. But, Joan, I think you should go too I'm really shocked at this situation After all, you were in my shop for almost two years Naturally your welfare concerns me."

She smiled "That's nice of you Mr Mulford By the way, what are you doing in Mexico?"

"Since the war ruined my business and I closed the shop, I've been having a vacation. I needed one after all these years. I worked hard, and it's good to be away."

Joan rose. "Can I let you know early in the morning about leaving? I'll have to talk it over with Mr. O'Malley."

"Of course. I do not plan to leave before noon, so take your time"

"You're not staying at the hotel?"

GALION FIRE CHIEF OBSERVES 23RD ANNIVERSARY AS FIREMAN

GALION — Galion's fire chief, Harry F. Kile, who yesterday observed his twenty-third anniversary as a fireman, has a hobby of collecting relics of fire equipment.

It was Jan. 1, 1923 that he became chief of the department, and since that time he has gathered the old fire department relics. Included in the collection is a silver trumpet which was won by the Old Niagara fire company at a tournament in Wooster, years ago, when that company was nationally known for winning tournaments.

The trumpet was the property of Frank Eisele before he moved to California a few years ago at which time he turned it over to Chief Kile. A uniform cap worn at various celebrations by Mr. Eisele, the constitution and by-laws of the Old Niagara fire department, which were printed in 1882, a wide leather belt worn by firemen at that time are among items in Mr. Kile's exhibit.

He also has a belt worn by the late Jeff Ganshorn, a picture of Herman Zellers who was the first chief, and H. G. Sponhauer who served as assistant chief at that time. Another picture in the collection is that of the late E. B. Burget who had the record of being the oldest fireman in the United States when he died.

There is also a horsecollar used in the old department, and a leather bucket that was used to fight fires, besides a hand-made bit that was used to drive the horses.

Old helmets worn years ago by the fire fighters when it was first in operation, two torches, and a picture of the Old Niagara department when the city building was on West Atwood street where the French Dry Cleaning establishment is now located, are in the display.

Chief Kile became a minuteman on Feb. 2, 1908, and it was not until April 16, 1918 that he became a regular fireman. At this time there was no chief and he was appointed captain of the department. Since Jan. 1, 1923, he has served as chief.

The meeting was in charge of Mrs. Herbert Speciman and plans were discussed for the "guest tea" to be held April 29 at the home of Mrs. J. B. McCarter.

THEATERS

Hilton Story.

James Hilton's genius for characterization is revealed again in "Rage in Heaven," current attraction at the Ohio. Psychological study of a weakling married to a beautiful girl the picture gives Montgomery his most powerful role since "Night Must Fall." Ingrid Bergman is the wife, whom Montgomery plots to throw in the company of his best friend, as a means of completing the torture he sets up for himself. George Sanders plays the friend and the cast includes Philip Merivale.

Villainous Role.

Of all the villain roles played by Sir Cedric Hardwicke on the screen he terms his part in "Victory," Joseph Conrad's story now showing at the Madison the worst type of character he has ever depicted. As an English "gentleman" living by his wits Conrad has for his partners in crime a veritable cut-throat and a gorilla-like "yes" man, Fredric March and Betty Field provide the romantic note to the Javanese setting. "Shadows On the Stairs," is the second pacture.

East Side Drama.

New York's East side with its pushcarts, clothing stands and other markets furnishes the setting for "Bowery Boy," starring Dennis O'Keefe at the Park. O'Keefe as a young doctor from Oklahoma in charge of a slum health station manages to regenerate a tough youngster, Jimmy Eaton, who has some misguided views about right and wrong. Gene Autry in "Blue Mountain Skies," shares the bill.

Great Cast.

"Land of Liberty," filmed by Cecil B. DeMille and with a cast including Wallace Beery and Don Ameche is showing at the Ritz. Frank Morgan in "The Wild Man From Borneo," with Billie Burke and Marjorie Main is the co-attraction.

Bank Robbery.

"Money and the Woman," a spine tingling mystery picture with Brenda Marshall and Jeffrey Lynn opens Friday at the Majestic. Lynn becomes involved in a bank robbery when he is mistaken for a gangster and poses up with Brenda Marshall as the wife of the instigator of the plot. To get the truth from the crooks Tim McCoy in "Outlaws of the Rio Grande," the second feature, has a band of counterfeiters to contend with after a wild flying climax.

NEW WASHINGTON — Misses Eunice Siefert and Mathelda Marquart entertained with a kitchen shower at the latter's home in honor of Miss Velma Lutz of Attica whose marriage to Clarence Eckstein was an event of April 14.

Progressive cootie was played and prizes awarded to Miss Margaret Steiger and Miss Wanda Fortney were in turn presented the bride-elect. Miniature chicks held scrolls revealing the wedding date.

PASSES BAR

Blind Youth Triumphs and Becomes Lawyer.

OGDEN, Utah —(AP)— As a boy, Donald H. Wilkinson of Ogden had his heart set on becoming a civil engineer. Through high school and Weber College here, he studied with that objective in mind. But six years ago—two months after his college graduation—a splinter of steel became lodged in his eye.

Complications set in. Wilkinson became blind. He had to give up engineering. But he wasn't daunted. He learned to read Braille and to operate a Braille typewriter.

Wilkinson enrolled at University of California at Berkeley four and a half years ago. He was determined this time to study law. He completed the usual five year course in four years—writing down instructors' lectures in Braille and studying them by touch.

His struggle for a career was rewarded when he took—and passed—the examinations for the California bar and was sworn in as a practicing attorney.

MARKED MAN

Traffic Expert Names Next Probable Victim.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—(U.P.) The person most liable to death in a motor accident is a male pedestrian who has passed his 50th birthday. He will be crossing the street in the middle of the block at night when he meets his death and—in two cases out of five—will have been drinking.

This description was given advanced traffic safety students at Pennsylvania State College by Burton W. Marsh, director of the American Automobile Association safety and traffic engineering department, on the basis of a nation-wide three-year survey.

Marsh said the study revealed also that the potential motor accident victim probably is a non-driver.

HOLDS HEARING FRIDAY ON NEW VOTING AREAS

Election Board's Plan to Split Washington and Madison District Studied.

Proposing to set up at least four additional voting precincts in Madison and Washington townships, the Richland county election board will conduct a public hearing on the plan at 3:30 p. m. Friday in the board's headquarters at the courthouse.

The board's proposal would establish two precincts in Washington township instead of one and probably would increase the Madison township precincts from six to nine, board officials said.

The re-districting action will be necessary, they pointed out, because of the rapid increase in population in Mansfield suburban districts which has doubled the number of voters in some precincts.

State election laws set the number of electors per precinct at 250 to 400 for convenient handling of voters and ballot tabulation at election time.

Precinct B in Madison township has 474 voters and most of the others are far above the limit, Clerk Philip Wolfe of the election board said.

Trustees from the two townships have been invited to attend the hearing, since the townships must pay the cost of the re-districting.

Wolfe and Deputy Clerk Walter Underwood of the election board have been working for several weeks on the re-districting program, mapping proposed districts and shifts in precinct boundaries to provide the most convenient handling of voters to prevent congestion at the polls.

MOTORIST SHUNS LICENSE PLATES

DUNKIRK, N. Y.— (UP) — James A. Vlachos was a little put out when he received license plates numbered 1-H 500 instead of 1-H 300. He had been receiving the latter number for several years and decided to investigate the change.

Vlachos, as a hobby, keeps a record of the license numbers of automobiles involved in accidents in the Dunkirk area. Glancing through his notes, the motorist was shocked to find that the 1-H 500 plates had been involved in fatal accidents in 1939 and 1940.

That was enough for Vlachos. He applied and got a new pair with a number that carried no blemishes, at least according to his records.

County Board and CCC Camp Sign to Construct Ditch

Richland county commissioners today had signed their first agreement with the Rocky Fork CCC camp for the improvement of a county ditch.

The project, which will cost the county only $80, calls for reconstruction of the Ruckman ditch in Cass township. Enrollees at the camp will do the work with the county providing the materials for the project.

Under the agreement, the county will establish the right-of-way for the ditch but it will assume no responsibility for any cause of action that might grow out of the project.

Commissioners recently signed a similar agreement with the CCC camp at Attica for improvement of a ditch in Plymouth township.

The Committee on the costs of medical care established by a 1928-31 survey that sick persons in the highest income groups received two and a half times as much medical service as persons in the lowest groups.

You Can't Print That!

(A compendium of tales that can't be told with names, because they're too true to print. If you see in them any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead—you've probably guessed right!)

KENNETH is a producer. A nice fellow, easy-going and humorous. Some time ago he was assembling a play in which he was starring his wife, and one applicant for the cast was so amusing and charming that Kenneth decided to hire him just for laughs. He gave the actor—whose name was Howard—the part of a butler in the play.

It was a role that was better than most butler roles—one that would take some doing. When Howard engaged for it, he confessed that he didn't have enough money to live through the next month until rehearsals started. So Kenneth invited the actor to live as his guest at his home on Long Island.

The actor succeeded in amusing and charming Kenneth's wife, Lorraine, and they enjoyed having him around. It was nice having him stay out on Long Island to keep Lorraine diverted while Kenneth went into town to attend to the details of the production.

When rehearsals started, it turned out Howard was not very good as the butler, but he was such fun to have around they kept him in the part.

Kenneth always staged his own plays, and when this one opened out of town he decided he'd set aside one day to work on Howard and try to get him in decent shape for the New York premiere. It didn't occur to him to tell either his wife or the actor what he had in mind, but the next day the butler received all Kenneth's attention.

Howard grew more and more nervous under a barrage of directions and suggestions, and so did Lorraine, sitting on the sidelines.

Suddenly Lorraine swept down to the footlights in an emotional rage, and cried: "Stop picking on Howard, stop it I know what you're doing, and I know why you're doing it! Stop it!"

Then the producer dismissed the rehearsal for an hour and went back to the hotel with his wife and the actor to ask:

So they told him.

"What goes on here?"

The play opened in New York the next week. It was a flop. It cost the producer about everything he had except the Long Island house. He gave that to his wife and Howard at the time of the divorce.

But you can't print that. Haven't actors who play butlers got trouble enough?

Bert is an orchestra leader with a flair for writing songs. He has turned out some of the top song hits of the past decade—and about four years ago he teamed up with an unknown song-plugger who also wrote ballads.

They clicked fast and big, and for the next year their songs made the Hit Parade as soon as the ink was dry on the piano copies. Simultaneously, Bert's band prospered—and that was the worst thing that could have happened to him. Because when he wasn't waving his baton, Bert began to drink and stay out late with every available chorine.

Mark, the other half of the team, tried in every possible way to keep Bert working. He locked him up in his apartment without clothes, liquor or cigarets until a tune was finished—and for a while that had results, but only for a while. Bert was too busy spending the money he was making—spending it faster than he was making it.

Finally Mark got tired playing nursemaid and passed the word around Tin Pan Alley that he was looking for a new teammate. He found one—a good, hardworking lad named Don who knew his stuff musically and was interested in staying on the straight and narrow.

The new combination prospered.

Bert didn't do so well. His big spending had put him deeply in debt, and he couldn't afford to pay his musicians, so he lost his band. He went back to his songwriting in earnest, but he found that Mark had been top man in the combination—and he couldn't write a click tune with anyone else.

So Bert started telling everyone along Broadway how Mark had become a big shot and had doublecrossed him by breaking up the team.

Bert never mentioned, of course, that Mark broke up the combination because he wouldn't work, and because he used to get the advances on their songs from music publishers and spend the money himself. He never mentioned that he still owes Mark a good piece of change.

But you can't print that. Bert is still popular with the transient night club mob he buys drinks for—and his grousing gives the Tin Pan Alley boys an excuse for rapping Mark, on the ground that he'd "gone Hollywood." Otherwise, folks might say it was envy—which it is!

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — When Anthony Quinn gets to be a movie star, he'll deserve a double tip of the hat. No man has a greater obstacle to hurdle for Tony Quinn is Cecil DeMille's son-in-law.

You think that might help? That, says Tony, is where you're wrong.

"Getting an audience with C. D. when he's working," says Tony with a wry smile, "is like getting in to see Winston Churchill during a crisis. And C. B. is always working."

ROBBIN COONS

Quinn, six-foot-plus son of an Irish father and Aztec mother, born in Chihuahua, Mexico, and reared (thanks to a Villa revolution) in Los Angeles, is getting his break—but no thanks to C. B.

It was DeMille who cast him as a Cheyenne Indian in "The Plainsman" and thus, indirectly, cast him as his son-in-law. During the pictupre Quinn met Katherine DeMille, whom he married. Quinn was under contract to Paramount.

"Everybody there thought anything I got was due to DeMille," says Tony. "I never got anything from DeMille—except the time I was kicking against playing a bit role and they called up my father-in-law and asked him to put me in it. I played it, but soon afterward I got away and went to Warner's. Did 'City for Conquest' there and they signed me. This 'Blood and Sand' part may help—it's a good part and I'm hoping. But I've got a lot to learn."

Of DeMille, Son-in-law Quinn says:

"He's the kind of man who can't be dominated. So am I, so there we are."

* * *

That air-lane gag of Bob Hope's about his pursuit of Madeline Carroll is coming out as a movie plot—but in reverse. They'll co-star in "A Lady in Pursuit"—with Madeleine doing the chasing . . . Rita Hayworth's first movie dancing since her "Dante's Inferno," debut is in "Blood and Sand," but she'll get plenty more as Astaire's partner in the army-life musical, "He's My Uncle." . . . Rita's dance in the bull-fight flicker is on the daring side—a bull-and-matador routine with Tony Quinn as the matador . . . Veronica Lake, so strikingly as the heavy in "I Wanted Wings," turn heroine for her next and starring picture, "China Pass."

U. S. DEFENSE PLANTS READY FOR EXPANSION

Manufacturers Report 'Farming Out' Plan to Swell Output By Several Billions.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Nearly 17,000 manufacturers have reported, in a survey completed today, that they are prepared to expand the nation's defense production by several billion dollars annually over anything previously predicted.

The survey, made by the national industrial council of the National Association of Manufacturers, shows the nation's factories have ready for this expansion the machinery and the floor space; that they will need thousands of new employes; that they are seeking—and getting—government orders with which to put their facilities to complete use.

Further they are expected to employ mass productive methods through a revolutionary plan of communal pooling, already embracing 184 communities.

These facts, still in process of detailed compilation, will be presented next week to William S. Knudsen, head of the office of production management, as a contribution toward speeding defense industries to an efficiency level unequalled in history.

They are the outstanding conclusions drawn by officials of the National Association of Manufacturers from a three-month census of factory facilities.

Walter B. Weisenburger, executive vice president of the NAM, commented: "Washington authorities have indicated they expect to place in excess of $25,000,000,000 worth of defense orders during 1941.

"Defense contract service officials as well as OPM executives are aiming at stimulating the 'farming out' subcontracting procedure to the extent that 50 per cent of these orders will reach the contributory small manufacturer."

Three objectives of the communal industrial plan on the side of social significance were represented as being: The prevention of unnecessary migrations of labor; the elimination of housing maladjustments; the prevention of overexpansion of factories.

BARBERTON O-B PLANT CLOSED

Union Calls Strike After Leaders, Company Fail to Agree on Contract.

Production at the Ohio Brass company's insulator plant at Barberton was halted today when 550 factory employes went out on strike at the call of Local 747 of the United Radio, Electrical and Machine Workers union, a CIO affiliate.

Company officials said negotiations with union representatives were stymied last night when the union objected to the inclusion of a clause in the proposed contract which would guarantee any employe or group of employes the right to present their grievances personally to the company.

The company is willing to enter into a contract with a recognition clause based on a provision of the Wagner Labor Relations act, W. M. Marr, factory manager at the Barberton plant, said.

Marr said the company would not enter into an agreement which would deny individual employes any right which they have under the Wagner act.

Following the breaking off of negotiations, union representatives called the strike at 7:30 a. m. today.

Plant operations were held up briefly about two weeks ago when the factory employes went on a one-day protest holiday."

Closing of the Barberton plant, which manufactures insulators exclusively, will not affect operations at the Ohio Brass plant in Mansfield unless the Barberton workers are out a considerable period of time, company officials said here.

HOUSE MUSTERS VOTE ON OHIO GUARD AS ADJOURNMENT NEARS

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Reliable signs for an early May adjournment of the Ohio legislature appeared today as house leaders mustered support for an important bill to create a state guard and naval militia.

Listed by legislative heads as a "must" bill, the guard measure will be voted upon in the house tomorrow as the legislature holds its first Friday session.

Meanwhile, the senate finance committee worked on the $351,800,000 general appropriations bill with the hope that it would be ready for a senate vote next week.

The bill has already been passed by the house.

Chairman Fred L. Adams, (R., Wood) said the committee may recommend the big money bill for passage on next Monday or Tuesday.

The house finance committee was to begin work today on a bill which is generally regarded as the prelude to the end of a session—the sundry claims bill which includes all types of claims which various persons and firms have against the state.

The bill, carrying claims totaling $350,000, was introduced yesterday by Chairman Paul E. Ballard, (R., Jackson) of the house finance committee. Claims ranged from 96 cents to $77,197.

The state guard and naval militia bill is a senate-passed measure but the bill was so extensively amended by the house military affairs committee that it will have to go back to the senate for concurrence in many changes.

The bill calls for establishment of a state guard and state naval militia only after one-half or more of the national guard is in federal service. It would have a force of 1,000 to 4,800 men and officers, including and maximum of 600 naval militiamen.

"The crack in the floor takes care of the house percentage."

Probably the first dandelions to appear in bloom on a Mansfield lawn this spring are at the south side of the courthouse where an underground heating system gave the golden blossoms a head start. The dandelions are blooming over a narrow strip extending from the courthouse toward the county jail. The heat line connecting the two buildings permits enough warmth to boost the growth of vegetation in the soil over the line.

Mansfielders were surprised yesterday afternoon following a shower to see not one but two rainbows off to the southeast. One of the rainbows formed a complete colorful arch while the other was but a faint echo of the first. The outside band of the first arc was red while the colors in the second rainbow were reversed with the red band on the inside.

Fonkalsrud, superintendent announced that the first lunch would be prepared today in the new kitchen of the $80,000 addition. Work is still going on in the wing and it will be some time before the debris is removed and necessary work completed, for a formal presentation of the structure to the public, Fonkalsrud said.

UP TO CITY

Mayor Says State Wants To Have Assurance of Funds.

Mayor William J. Locke announced today that the city had been called on to make emergency provisions for the raising of $25,000 to guarantee its share of $31,000 in the construction of the $249,000 Baltimore and Ohio overhead project on West Fourth street.

The mayor indicated that a special council meeting, the second this month, would be called to make final arrangements for approving plans for the project.

The state highway department has requested that the city give a guarantee that action has been taken to raise the $25,000 which the city has promised to contribute this year. Council had already planned to issue bonds covering this amount in September. The remaining $6,000 was to be given next year.

Included with the plans to be approved, however, was a statement to be signed by City Auditor Paul L. Kelley stating that the bonds had either been sold or were in the process of delivery. Since this is not the case, the city will have to make some compromise with the state department to allow it to continue with its plans for early start of work on the project, the mayor said.

FOREIGN AGENT HELD AFTER HE STEALS BULLET

Trapped While Trying To Get Chemical Analysis of New Weapon.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The American government has foiled an attempt by a foreign agent representing one of the Axis powers to obtain one of the most valuable military secrets of the United States army, it was learned today.

The secret which the foreign agent almost obtained concerns the chemical composition of a new and revolutionary type of explosive for bullets and shells that is now being manufactured for the American army.

The foreign agent was caught by the FBI on the Pacific coast as he was attempting to obtain an analysis of a bullet which contained the new explosive. The bullet mysteriously disappeared from a package which was sent from the coast to army authorities in Washington.

When the package reached Washington and the bullet was missing, the FBI was notified immediately. FBI agents in the Pacific coast city from which the package had been sent were put to work on the case.

The G-men started a check of all chemical laboratories in the neighborhood and within a few days discovered that a foreigner had presented a bullet to one of them for an analysis of its composition. A trap was set for him and he was apprehended when he sought to regain possession of the bullet.

He is now being held for investigation and an effort is being made to ascertain how he managed to get the bullet out of the package sent to Washington.

Large scale production of the explosive is expected shortly, and it is likely to be used for the navy as well as the army.

The new explosive is manufactured of a waste material of which there is an abundance in the United States, and it costs about one tenth the cost of the ingredients ordinarily used in the manufacture of shells.

Willkie Returns To Law Practice In Eastern Firm

NEW YORK — (INS) — Sign painters today went to work on a glass-paneled door of a law office in New York's Broad Street—inscribing in gilt letters the name of "Willkie, Owen, Otis & Bailly."

Willkie, voicing pleasure at getting back into law, which always has been his profession, said he would continue his interest and activity in politics, expressing himself in articles and speeches.

Springtime Is Permanent Wave Time

By MME. QUI VIVE

Though permanent wave machines bubble and steam all the year long, the big rush of customers is in the merry springtime. One can endure a despairing permanent in cold weather, by using the metal curlers a little oftener, but when the tulips bloom one doesn't want to bother. If a new wave is on the calendar of your activities, do a little heavy thinking, put your tresses in condition.

The longer the period between waves, the better the new one will be because the shafts will be more and more relaxed and will produce a more durable coil. A weekly hot oil treatment will insure against dryness, which usually follows the hard-boiled wave. The night before the shampoo, heat some mineral or olive oil, part your hair at various places, trickle the oil along the partings with a large medicine dropper, or rub it on with cotton pledgets. Then, with oiled palms, give the ends a thorough, brisk lubrication.

If you will take time to give your brain mat a rousing brushing before the oiling, it will be grateful. The tug of the brush acts favorably upon the blood vessels in the papillae in which the hair roots rest, and it will stimulate and strengthen the growth, because it is from the blood streams that they get food and lodgings.

The wise customer for hirsute billows will make an early morning appointment. There will be less rush then, and it is the hurried operator who does slack work. It takes considerable time to part off the hair in even strands—and they should be blocked out evenly—and it takes time to wind each strand tightly. If the hair is not stretched to the limit, the strong coil quality will be lacking.

Patronize a shop of high reputation that will stand back of its services, make good if the wave is not up to standard. An experienced, conscientious operator can give a satisfactory treatment to hair of any quality, coarse or fine, unless certain hair dyes have been used, in which case she or he will probably refuse to do the work. Some dyes do not make a wave impossible. If you have used one, 'fess up.

There is a difference in the lotions used on the little pads that encase the metal rods. Some are better than others; shops of good standing use high grade products. Machines merely furnish the heat, so they are all good. Success depends almost entirely upon the solutions used and the skill of the operator. Shops keep a report of each wave; if you get a good one, go back there for the next. Timing has been recorded and timing is important.

Operators who aren't rushed often make several test curls to determine which fluid is best for your kind of hair. Anyhow, don't urge speed. That's fatal to a first class job.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

HOW COULD I answer Dicky's question in a manner that would satisfy him without his guessing the danger which I probably would incur during my impending railroad journey to New York?

"I can't tell you now. But Ronald listened in on the other conversation, and he's listening in on this one. I'll tell you about it, as soon as I can. Let's talk now 'of shoes and ships and sealing wax.' I see Helena coming this way."

"Okay," Dicky said, and was ready for our hostess when she came up to us with a little satisfied smile playing about her lips.

"Whatever am I going to do about that child of mine?" she asked plaintively. "When she's home, it's just one telephone call after another, from boys wanting to take her here, there, and everywhere. I want her to be popular, goodness knows, but she suits me nearly too well."

All her mother love, and her pride in her daughter's popularity was reflected in her voice, and her face, and my throat was so suddenly constricted with anguished pity for her if she should have to face what her idolized child was really doing, that I could not have answered her if my life had depended upon my speaking.

But Dicky, as always, stepped easily into the breach. With a sidelong glance at me, he spoke to Helena with a chuckle in his voice.

"Now, Helena, what would you do if she never had any calls at all, if you had what the boys used to dub a 'wet smack' on your hands?"

Helena shuddered visibly.

"Oh! I know!" she said. "That would be awful. Thank Heaven I've never had to face anything like that."

"No, you've been spared that," Dicky answered a bit dryly, and I knew that he was echoing my thought that there might be far worse things for Helena Brixton to face than being the mother of an unpopular girl.

Carolyn came back into the room after another minute, and her mother addressed her playfully.

"Well! who is it this time, Baby? Another love lorn young man?"

Carolyn giggled, but it had a hollow sound, and I know that she was holding herself together with difficulty. She had not been able to give the gangster the information he had wanted—he would have much preferred to know the number of my compartment than to know that I would have a seat in one of the many coaches on the train—and he probably had made her feel his displeasure.

"Aren't you awful Mums?" she queried. "Don't you know boys aren't love lorn any more? That's awfully dated. And this isn't another one. It's the same one, with another idea about a date. He thinks he's going to get two of them, but I have another think coming about that. It isn't a good thing to let a boy get the idea he can date you whenever he happens to take the idea into his head."

Ready for the Journey

She was so young, so untried, so inexperienced, that, knowing as I did, the savage demands that probably had just been made upon her, I felt a great pity for her welling up in my heart, even though there was also great rancor there for what I considered her betrayal of Marion.

But there was nothing I could do to help her, I reminded myself, and I must be alert to hinder her in any possible attempt to speak to Dicky.

The next minute, however, Ronald came back into the room, and with a sigh of relief, I saw him come over to Carolyn, and knew that I need fear no further revelation on her part. With a feeling of release, I spoke to Dicky:—

"Isn't it time I went upstairs and got ready for the journey?" I asked.

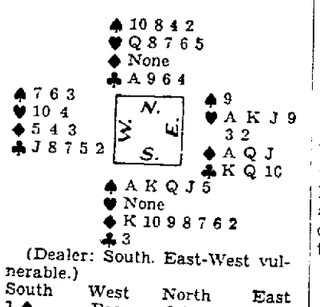
"The Authority on Authorities"

APPRECIATE YOUR GIFTS.

When the opponents have been so kind as to double a contract on which you can make a confident redouble, you are probably the recipient of a very fine gift. You ought to appreciate it, and prove the fact by working carefully to make the redoubled contract. Extra tricks may be extra nice, especially when they carry the redoubled value, but how silly you are if you jeopardize the entire gift by striving for too many tricks.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Rdbl

What a tough spot East was in to find a good bid, while vulnerable, after North's heart call. His patience in passing was rewarded, it seemed, when the opponents got so high that he could make a gleeful double. He would have been out of luck, though, if South had not become greedy and badly misplayed the hand.

West led the heart 10, and South decided to try to take all of the tricks. He ruffed this with the spade 5, next a diamond with the spade 2, led the spade 4 to the A, ruffed the second diamond with the spade 8, then a heart with the spade K and a third diamond with the spade 10. He returned to his hand by ruffing a heart with the spade Q and laid down his last trump, the J. If both defenders had followed suit, he would have taken all the rest of the tricks, but East did not. This left West with the last trump, so after the club A South got no more tricks, being down two.

For four tricks, all was in good order, but then South should have quit the ruffing. If he had returned to his hand with the spade 10 to the K, then laid down the Q, settling the hostile trumps, he could have given up one diamond and had the spade J left for re-entry to run the rest of the diamonds. Played thus, he could have made an overtrick, without having to depend on an even break of trumps.

Develop Good Study Habits

By GARRY C. MYERS Ph.D.

Most parents, even most teachers, are prone merely to urge the student with low grades to study harder. This doesn't help very often. Excepting for about one student, out of a thousand, hard mental work is necessary to win success at studies. Yet mere industry does not guarantee success. Many a student who drives himself to drudge over books for long tedious hours barely passes or entirely fails, in spite of his industry.

Please let me address a few remarks to the student with average or superior ability who lacks self-discipline in regard to study. Some of these suggestions will obviously apply also to the plodder who gets poor results from his endeavors. You probably have no regular plan of study, and do not hold yourself to a definite study program.

Begin early in the evening and, when at all possible, allow nothing to divert your attention from your work. Write out a schedule and follow it literally. Have a regular place to study. Assemble all your needed materials before you begin. While in class at school, be sure you get the exact assignments, making notes if it is necessary.

As you proceed in your studying at home, don't allow yourself to day-dream. Catching yourself at it in the middle of a page, go back to the beginning. It might aid you to concentrate if, as with solid reading matters, you write down a sentence in your own words to summarize each paragraph.

At the beginning of your study call to mind a summary of the high spot learned that day, in the subject at hand, and do likewise before leaving the subject for the night.

You can save an enormous amount of time and effort if you will train yourself to pay strict attention in class to the lecture or discussion. Some students practice this so well they must do little or no work on certain subjects outside of class. Other students sit and dream through the entire class period.

A certain student who worked hard in the evening, told me he often sat through a whole class period without hearing a thing. Another said he found that by keeping alert every minute in class he did not have to study much outside of class to get good grades.

Practically every student in high school or college has items in nearly every subject which need to be committed to memory. He easily can ascertain what these items are. Wishing to succeed, he drives himself to memorize them and drills himself on them from time to time.

The successful student has cultivated the habit of preparing all papers and other special assignments on time, carefully giving himself a definite time for each, postponing none and letting no assignments pile up.

With the high school and college youth in mind, I have greatly elaborated on the foregoing and added numerous other suggestions, in my "Tips to Students," to be had by writing me at 235 E. 45th St., New York City, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, April 18.

The very intriguing planetary configurations ruling this day may point to definitely radical, sweeping and far-reaching crises, in which the entire future with its destiny and fortunes may be decided upon. There are signs of drama, surprises, peculiar and thrilling experiences as well as most alluring adventures of a private nature, probably concerning the affectional or emotional life. There is also every prospect of the attainment of the ambitions, with the materialization of the most cherished aims and desires.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the threshold of a memorable year in which the experiences may be radical as well as romantic, with definite shaping of the future fate and fortune. Surprising and dramatic events are presaged, with probable uprooting, new associations and altered objectives. But the most cherished aims and aspirations as well as worldly ambitions are in line for attainment.

A child born on this day should have many and divers talents, with originality, independence and love of adventure and romance.

The first U. S. census in 1790 showed a population of nearly 4,000,000—considerably less than the present population of New York City.

Mansfield's reputation for hospitality is being challenged again. And unless the city rises to the challenge as it has in the past it may have guests sleeping in the streets tomorrow night.

The housing committee of the Mansfield Relays needs beds and breakfast for 98 boys who have not yet been assigned rooms for Friday night.

Several years ago the committee faced a similar situation, and threatened to use the high school gym floor as an overnight dormitory.

After that story came out in the paper hundreds of telephone calls were received from citizens offering to house one or two boys for the night.

The committee would welcome those hundreds of calls today. They wouldn't want those boys going back home with a story of being forced to sleep on a hardwood floor the night before they ran in the Relays.

Call Ralph Chapman at the Y. M. C. A. and tell him you'll take care of a boy or two for the night. I wouldn't talk you into something I wouldn't do myself. So there'll be two boys from the Relays in the Hess household tomorrow night.

* * *

Bill Snypp, Lima News sport editor, notes with satisfaction that Ohio State league managers this season are infielders.

He didn't like the way Mansfield's Dewey Stover delayed the game last year by strolling in from right field to protest decisions by umpires.

Says Snypp: "Stover delayed games numerous times, often unnecessarily. It was no attraction to watch him amble to and fro with the speed of a three-legged turtle."

* * *

You never can tell. Bill Mansfield's manager may be playing in the outfield this season. He's that versatile. And if the occasion demands he can patrol the outer gardens with the best of 'em.

* * *

Whether Alex Clowson is versatile enough to amble to, and then amble fro with the speed of a Stover is something we'll have to decide when we see him in action.

As one old ambler to another, I'm willing to wait to see it. Scramble Amble they used to call me in the old days.

Lorain Gridder Rolls 300 Game

LORAIN—(AP)—A former college football star who has been bowling only five years stepped into the ranks of the nation's leading keglers today.

* * *

Hank Andorka, a 35-year-old alley owner, smashed the maples for a perfect 300 and a subsequent 821 series over his own layout last night to miss by only three pins the season's highest three-game total.

* * *

The Lorain star followed his 300 with 268 and 253 hitting 31 strikes of a possible 36. He rolled 15 consecutive "all-downs" before the No. 10 pin stuck.

Records of the American Bowling Congress show a score of 821 posted by Peter Kisloski of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the top mark of 1940-41 in league competition.

Andorka played football at Kiski prep school and West Liberty State Teachers [illegible]

Milnar Tames Chicago

Tribe Southpaw Limits Sox To Two Bingles.

By JUDSON BAILEY.

FOR REASONS that never have been very clear, a lot of people in baseball do not think Albert Joseph (Happy) Milnar is a first rate pitcher, although he won 18 games for the Cleveland Indians last year.

* * *

His critics have pointed out that although he was a tremendous success in the Southern Association, he was no great shakes with Milwaukee in the American Association or with Cleveland in two seasons preceding 1940.

He worked fractions of 23 games for the Tribe in 1938 and finished with a record of 3 and 1 and an earned run average of 5.03. The next season he worked in 37 games and won 14 and lost 12.

Now it looks like the big, 27-year-old southpaw may be able to convince the skeptics that his steady, effective effort last year was his real gait, and that his two seasons with New Orleans, where he won a total of 46 games and lost 18, were no fluke.

Milnar shut out the Chicago White Sox 6-0 on two singles yesterday. He was as superb as the Cleveland fans had expected Bob Feller to be the day before. The hits he gave came in succession in the fifth inning after two were out and only one other Chicago batter got on base in the whole game.

The Indians themselves were rationed to six hits, but one of these was a three-run homer by Hal Trosky and another was a two-run circuit clout by Roy Weatherly.

That brand of play against a club as formidable as the White Sox showed why Cleveland ranks up front among the American league pennant contenders.

The world champion Cincinnati Reds were cut down again by the St. Louis Cardinals, 4-2 with Mort Cooper besting Johnny Vander Meer.

Brooklyn was bumped a second time by the New York Giants 3-1 in another pitching duel Harry Gumbert held the Dodgers to five hits and Kirby Higbe, victim of four errors by his infield, gave the Giants six—one of them a single by Harry Danning with the bases loaded.

Manuel Salvo held the Phillies to three hits as the Boston Bees banged out a 4-1 triumph.

The New York Yankees dropped a slugging session for the Philadelphia Athletics, 10-7. Among the A's 13 hits were two home runs and a single by Dick Siebert and a homer by Bob Johnson. Five runs were bunched in a big sixth inning. Nelson Potter plodded the whole route for the A's, yielding 10 hits, including round-trippers by Twink Selkirk and Joe Dibaggio, who also had two doubles and a single.

Detroit's American league champion Tigers made a delayed start at St. Louis and were beaten, 8-1 by the Browns, just as they had been on opening day last year. Elden Auker muzzled the Tigers with four hits, while the Browns tore into Buck Newsom and Dizzy Trout for 14 and crowded seven runs into the eighth inning.

The Boston Red Sox took their second straight from the Washington Senators, 8-7, but had to go 12 innings to do it. The Sox came from behind to tie the score in the ninth with three runs on homers by Bob Doerr and Jim Tabor and won out on Pete Fox's third single of the day, scoring Dom Dimaggio from second.

HAWAII WANTS TO SEE JOE LOUIS IN ACTION

SAN FRANCISCO — (CP) — Hawaii would like to see Joe Louis in action $50,000 worth, Promoter Jimmy Murray said today. He also is prepared to offer Lou Salica $5,000 to defend his bantam crown against David Young, Chinese-Hawaiian, who recently decisioned Little Dado.

Murray, who arrived yesterday from Honolulu, said today the city was a prizefighting gold mine and a $50,000 turnout was assured Louis against any heavyweight able to get into the ring.

Softball Board Formed

Joe Lesch Named Head of City Commission.

JOE LESCH was named president of the newly created Mansfield Softball Commission at a meeting held last night (Wednesday) at the Y. M. C. A. George Thomas representing Johns park was elected vice president and Donald D. Cram secretary and treasurer. Earl Pittinger was named recording secretary.

* * *

The Mansfield Softball Commission is a newly created board with the backing of the Mansfield Park association and upon their shoulders falls the responsibility of promoting and supervising softball and other recreation activities in the city of Mansfield.

At last night's meeting several of the initial rules were passed which will vitally concern softball teams this year.

The entry fees for the Commercial and Class A league teams has been set for $20 with the entry fee for Church league teams remaining at the old price of $15. Out of the extra fees, the commission will purchase equipment for the parks to be used in softball activities.

Another major rule was the permitting of each Class A team to go out of the county and get ball players. The rule states that each Class A team is permitted to use two players from bordering counties. This rule was inserted this year due to the large number of Class A softball pitchers and players who have been drafted. This ruling also will have a tendency to speed up the league.

One of the biggest questions was the problem of classifying ball players and the commission settled the question by forcing all entry blanks to be in the hands of the secretary by May 1 and they will then classify each individual player.

It is also the plan of the commission to use the added funds received from entry fees to sponsor children's softball leagues in the morning and afternoons at the various parks. It is the hope of the group to have a younger boys' league in the morning and an older boys' league to play in the afternoons.

Entry blanks for the leagues this year can be secured at the Y. M. C. A. the latter part of this week. Team managers are requested to get their blanks at their earliest convenience as May 1 has been set as the absolute deadline.

President Joe Lesch has called a final organization meeting of the commission for next Wednesday evening at the Y. M. C. A. when practically all of the playing and eligibility rules will be set. Lesch will also appoint all standing committees at this time.

One Substitution Made In Tonight's Fight Program

One substitution has been made in the fight card booked tonight at the armory, but it's a substitution that won't hurt the show a bit, according to Ivan Tope, manager of Columbus boxers on the program.

* * *

Jim Kendell, 173, will take the place of Charles Hodge of Columbus, in the five-round semi-final bout with Al Sauer.

Hodge got a job Tuesday and is working nights according to Tope who claims Kendall is just as good if not better, than the boy originally booked to meet Sauer.

Paul Carbetta makes his first appearance in the Mansfield ring in months in the main five-rounder, meeting Willie Marchal, Columbus flyweight champion of central Ohio, and American Legion state title holder.

Fans are anxious to see how much Carbetta learned in his recent battles in Cleveland, Chicago and Boston golden gloves warfare.

Officials for tonight's bouts will be Paul Eliot, George Allerding and Gip Miller, judges; Sam Fox, timer; John Eichinger and Jack Hamilton, referees, and James Brownscomb, announcer.

The complete card:

Conn's Mad About Delay on Fight

PITTSBURGH —(AP)— The maddest guy in the fistic world today is Billy Conn—mad because he figures the lush heavyweight title is right within his grasp and yet no word from Promoter Mike Jacobs that his fight with Joe Louis is "on."

* * *

Jacobs had said the scrap would be held in June but now, for reasons best known to himself, he wants it postponed to July.

* * *

Which rubbed the fur the wrong way on both Cannand his manager, Johnny Ray. Johnny says June would be the better month from the financial angle. Conn would be at his peak then and might suffer from the month's lay-off if the fight is postponed.

GREENBERG KEEPS DRAFT BOARD DATE

DETROIT—(INS)—Hank Greenberg, the American league's most valuable ball player, comes home tomorrow to keep a date in Briggs stadium with the Detroit Tigers against the Cleveland Indians and also with his local draft board.

Hank has been ordered by his draft board to appear in a Detroit hospital at 10 a. m. for a complete physical examination by his board's medical advisory board. The medical board will either sustain or reverse a decision made by a Florida doctor who recommended that Hank be deferred from army service because of flat feet.

Pending the new examination, Hank has been classified in 1A—available for immediate service.

HOMES BURNED

ANKENYTOWN — The Ewers-Moore-Harris 14-room house on a farm one quarter of a mile south of here burned to the ground yesterday afternoon.

Edward Koppert and family reside there and their household goods were almost a total loss. Nothing could be done to save the house during the strong wind. Numerous fires started near a large wagon shed across the road but the building was saved. Koppert was on an errand and returning home found the upper part of the house in flames. Cause is attributed to a defective flue. Koppert's son lost $70 in cash in the blaze.
